

LIBRARIES

Under provisions of the law, certain libraries are designated by Congress as depositories for printed publications issued by the Government agencies. Through them, various documents printed by the Government Printing Office are made available to residents of every State. Distribution of printed publications is made by the Superintendent of Documents.

Many of these depository libraries and other general and technical libraries also receive multilithed publications of the Bureau of Mines, particularly the Reports of Investigations and the Information Circulars, which are distributed mainly by the Bureau.

Libraries maintaining a file of Bureau of Mines publications are the best sources for reports published by the Bureau when the publications are out of print or copies no longer are available from the Superintendent of Documents or the Bureau.

In the United States some libraries maintain complete files of Bureau reports; others carry only selected series or classes. The following list contains the names and locations of the depository libraries (indicated by D in parentheses) and some other libraries receiving various series of reports and documents issued by the Bureau of Mines. The figures in parentheses, following the names of the libraries, indicate the type of Bureau publications generally received on a regular basis by each library. They are:

- (1) All Bulletins, Reports of Investigations, Information Circulars, and other technical reports.
- (2) Reports of Investigations and Information Circulars.
- (3) Bulletins, Minerals Yearbooks, and certain other publications.
- (4) Bulletins only.
- (5) Minerals Yearbooks only.

In addition, many of these libraries receive periodical reports and statistical releases.
